Foreword & Table of Contents

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.schulichlaw.dal.ca/dlj

Part of the Labor and Employment Law Commons

Recommended Citation
"Foreword & Table of Contents" (2020) 43:2 Dal LJ.

This Foreword is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at Schulich Law Scholars. It has been accepted for inclusion in Dalhousie Law Journal by an authorized editor of Schulich Law Scholars. For more information, please contact hannah.steeves@dal.ca.
Labour Law

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Article Title</th>
<th>Author(s)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Labour Law as a Subset of Employment Law? Up-dating Langille’s Insights with a Capabilities Approach</td>
<td>Bruce P. Archibald</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“Labour Law is a Subset of Employment Law” Revisited</td>
<td>Alan Bogg</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Employment Law Revisited</td>
<td>Mark Freedland</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Unifying the Field: Mapping the Relationship Between Work Law Regimes in Ontario, Then and Now</td>
<td>Claire Mummé</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>If Labour Law is a Subset of Employment Law, What is Employment Law a Subset of?</td>
<td>Brian Langille</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

- Illuminating False Light: Assessing the Case for the False Light Tort in Canada
  - Fraser Duncan
- Re-thinking the Process for Administering Oaths and Affirmations
  - Colton Fehr
- Faith and/in Medicine: Religious and Conscientious Objections to MAID
  - Daphne Gilbert
- Consumer Credit in Canada: A Regulatory Patchwork
  - Micheline Gleixner
- Does “No, Not Without a Condom” Mean “Yes, Even Without a Condom”?: The Fallout from R v Hutchinson
  - Lise Gottel & Isabel Grant
- The Conceptual Gap Between Doré and Vavilov
  - Mark Mancini
- Billings without Bilking: Regulating Time-Based Legal Fees
  - Noel Semple
- The Deliberative Dimensions of Modern Environmental Assessment Law
  - Jocelyn Stacey
- POGG and Treaties: The Role of International Agreements in National Concern Analysis
  - Gib van Ert
- Responsible Scholarship in a Crisis: A Plea for Fairness in Academic Discourse on Carbon Pricing References
  - Stepan Wood, Meinhard Doelle & Dayna Nadine Scott

Special Contributions

- On the Presence of the Past in the Future of International Labour Law
  - Adelle Blackett
- Small Claims Disputes in Nova Scotia and Access to Justice
  - Bill Charles
This issue is the second of two for Volume 43. Cite as (2020) 43:2 Dal LJ

The Dalhousie Law Journal is published by the Schulich School of Law of Dalhousie University. Communications concerning editorial matters should be addressed to:
The Editor
Dalhousie Law Journal
Schulich School of Law, Dalhousie University
1459 Oxford Street
Halifax, Canada
B3H 4R2
Telephone: (902) 494-1469
Fax: (902) 494-1316
E-mail: editor.dlj@dal.ca.
Website address: http://www.dal.ca/dlj
The views expressed in the contents of the Journal are those of the authors. Neither the Dalhousie Law Journal nor Dalhousie University is responsible for opinions expressed by the authors.

Submissions: The Editorial Committee welcomes the submission of material for possible publication. Please submit electronically to editor.dlj@dal.ca. All citations should follow the Canadian Guide to Uniform Legal Citation, 9th ed (Toronto: Carswell, 2018).

Copyright: All articles in this issue of the Dalhousie Law Journal are licensed under a Creative Commons BY 4.0 Licensing (https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/). Articles may be reproduced, shared and adapted, provided you give proper name and journal citation, provide a link to the license, and indicate if changes were made. You may do so in any reasonable manner, but not in any way that suggests the licensor endorses you or your use.

The Dalhousie Law Journal is indexed in the Index to Canadian Legal Periodical Literature, the Current Law Index and the Index to Legal Periodicals.
Labour Law as a Subset of Employment Law? Up-dating Langille’s Insights with a Capabilities Approach
Bruce P. Archibald ................................................................. 445

“Labour Law is a Subset of Employment Law” Revisited
Alan Bogg ................................................................................. 479

Employment Law Revisited
Mark Freedland ........................................................................ 515

Unifying the Field: Mapping the Relationship Between Work Law Regimes in Ontario, Then and Now
Claire Mummé ........................................................................... 543

If Labour Law is a Subset of Employment, Law What is Employment Law a Subset of?
Brian Langille ........................................................................... 581

Illuminating False Light: Assessing the Case for the False Light Tort in Canada
Fraser Duncan ........................................................................... 605

Re-thinking the Process for Administering Oaths and Affirmations
Colton Fehr ................................................................................. 637

Faith and/in Medicine: Religious and Conscientious Objections to MAiD
Daphne Gilbert ......................................................................... 657

Consumer Credit in Canada: A Regulatory Patchwork
Micheline Gleixner ..................................................................... 697

Does “No, Not Without a Condom” mean “Yes, Even Without a Condom”? The Fallout from R v Hutchinson
Lise Gottel & Isabel Grant ............................................................ 767

The Conceptual Gap Between Doré and Vavilov
Mark Mancini ............................................................................ 793

Billing without Bilking: Regulating Time-Based Legal Fees
Noel Semple .............................................................................. 835

The Deliberative Dimensions of Modern Environmental Assessment Law
Jocelyn Stacey ........................................................................... 865

POGG and Treaties: The Role of International Agreements in National Concern Analysis
Gib van Ert ................................................................................ 901

Responsible Scholarship in a Crisis: A Plea for Fairness in Academic Discourse on Carbon Pricing References
Stepan Wood, Meinhard Doelle & Dayna Nadine Scott ................. 929

Special Contributions
On the Presence of the Past in the Future of International Labour Law
Adelle Blackett ........................................................................ 947

Small Claims Disputes in Nova Scotia and Access to Justice
Bill Charles .............................................................................. 963
Labour Law versus Employment Law in the UK and Canada: A Brian Langille Legacy

The special segment in this Volume 43, which is devoted to an exercise in comparative labour, is the brain-child of Alan Bogg and Mark Freedland. Both were at Oxford University in 2016, thinking about the up-coming third conference of the Labour Law Research Network (LLRN) in Toronto, which was scheduled for summer of 2017. (Alan is now at Bristol.) They thought it would be interesting to explore distinctions between labour law and employment law in both Canada and the United Kingdom, where the notions have different connotations and but considerable overlap from various perspectives. They thought that a useful starting point for comparative analysis would be the influential article written by Brian Langille, who was at the time of authorship at Dalhousie Law School, entitled “Labour Law is a Subset of Employment Law”: (1981), 31 UTLJ 200. Bruce Archibald (Dalhousie) and Claire Mummé (at Windsor, and a former post-doc at Dalhousie) were recruited to provide Canadian input to the project. A spirited round-table involving the four was held at the LLRN 3 conference. The discussion generated a good deal of engagement among those in attendance. After the initial event was over, the four thought that it would be valuable and fun to transfer their deliberations and debates into publishable form. The four invited Brian Langille (long since at University of Toronto) to write a response. Brian agreed with alacrity. All are delighted and grateful that the Dalhousie Law Journal, and the peer reviewers for the collection, were willing to give these ruminations a place in the academic sun. The hope is that readers may find the results to be of both theoretical and practical interest. In addition, the original proponents of this special issue are pleased to see that the editors have included at the end of this volume the Note, “On the Presence of the Past in the Future of International Labour Law” which was presented as the Horace E. Read Memorial Lecture at the Schulich School of Law by our esteemed colleague Adelle Blackett (McGill). We trust it can be seen that we are all committed in our own ways to the emancipatory and humanizing potential of both domestic and international labour and employment law.

Bruce Archibald
Professor Emeritus
Schulich School of Law at Dalhousie University